Top risk flags

- RISK Cash-in-hand work lacks documentary evidence
Work paid in cash without payslips, ABN on record, or tax declared is very difficult to verify. Home Affairs may not accept it toward the 88-day count without strong corroborating evidence.
- RISK Specified work day count may be insufficient for second grant
A second grant of the 417 visa requires exactly 88 days of specified work in an eligible regional area during the first visa. If the day count is borderline, evidence of every working day is critical. Days worked under a cash-only arrangement without records are at risk of not being counted.
- ELAG Financial threshold may not be met
Without sufficient accessible savings at the time of application, the 417 application is at risk. The current minimum threshold should be verified with the department — the figure in legislation is updated periodically.
- ELAG Specified work location may not be in an eligible regional area
Work must be performed in a designated regional or low-population-growth area defined by the relevant legislative instrument (postcodes and LGAs). Urban work does not qualify. The postcode of the actual work location — not the employer's head office — determines eligibility.
