Top risk flags

- RISK Relationship evidence is limited across the four pillars
Home Affairs assesses partner visa applications across four pillars of shared life: financial, household, social, and commitment. Weak evidence in any pillar — especially if the relationship is recent — raises credibility concerns.
- RISK Relationship evidence is limited across the four pillars
Home Affairs assesses partner visa applications across four pillars of shared life: financial, household, social, and commitment. Weak evidence in any pillar raises credibility concerns.
- ELAG Third-party statutory declarations not included
Statutory declarations from friends, family, or colleagues who know the couple are a standard and expected part of a partner visa application. Their absence is notable.
- ELAG Cohabitation history not clearly documented
Living together is one of the strongest indicators of a genuine relationship. If shared address history is absent or inconsistent, the household pillar of evidence is weakened.
- ELAG Sponsor eligibility may not have been confirmed
The Australian partner (sponsor) must be approved before the visa can be granted. Sponsors with certain criminal history, prior sponsorship history, or who don't meet residency criteria may be ineligible.
